Do you ever sit back and think what your life would have been like had you attended a SWAC school?

I came really really close to going to Texas Southern for pharmacy school. With only 4 pharmacy schools in Texas, there weren't many choices. If Tech hadn't came calling, I would have been looking that direction.

Are most of the students in their pharmacy school black? Do the traditionally black colleges still stick to that? I watched a little of Grambling and Southern, and only saw a white kicker.

From the few TSU pharm students I have met, it appears to be a bit more diverse than the rest of the student body. I still think that their is a greater proportion at TSU than at other schools.

An odd tidbit about them is that they are located right across the street from another pharmacy school - UH. So ZERO pharm schools in D/FW, yet Houston gets 2 across the street from each other.
